QUESTIONS PRESENTED FOR REVIEW

Whether the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit set a lesser standard for a plaintiff in a Title VII case to demonstrate dissimilar treatment. Citing Brown v. State of Tennessee, 693 F. 2d 60, 603 (6th Cir. 1982).

Whether the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit set a lesser standard for a plaintiff in a Title VII case, to demonstrate pretext. Therefore, allowing a defendant to make bold contradictions and inconsistencies in their articulated reasons for their actions and not demonstrate pretext.

Whether the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit decision to affirm a summary judgment creates an environment that encourages the use of a inappropriate weapon for resolving Title VII violations, and sets a lesser standard, which only applies to Title VII cases..

Whether the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit decision to affirm a summary judgment violates a plaintiff's in a Title VII case Civil Rights and Constitutional Rights, to the right to a jury trail. citing , Miller v. Faircild Indus||, Inc. 797 F. 727, 732 (9th Cir. 1986) "Where reasonable minds could differ, an issue of material fact remains for the tier of facts."

PETITION FOR A WRIT OF CERTIORARI
TO THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEASL
FOR THE SIXTH CIRCUT

Petitioner, James N. Rivers, respectfully request the a Writ of Certiorari issue to review the Judgment and Opinion and the United States Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit entered in the above entitled proceeding on February 2, 1996.

OPINIONS

The Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit's Opinion is reprinted in the Appendix ("App.") to this Petition at App - 1 .

This Decision affirmed the District Court's Memorandum Opinion an Order granting judgment in favor of the Respondents which is reprinted at App - 6 .

JURISDICTION

The United States Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit affirmed the Order Granting Summary Judgment of the District Court for the Western District of Tennessee Western Division on March 16, 1995. This Court's jurisdiction is invoked pursuant to 28 U.S.C. Section 1254(1).

U.S. Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit, Appeal No. 95-5255, signed February 2, 1996.

U.S. District Court for the Western District of Tennessee Western Division, Case No. 93-3023-G. Order Taxing Cost signed March 16, 1995.

U.S. District Court for the Western District of Tennessee Western Division, Case No. 933023-G. Order Granting Defendant's Second Motion for Summary Judgment, signed January 18, 1995.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

The Plaintiff, James Rivers, (black male) applied for a full time control room agent position in Oakland, California with his employer, the Defendant, Federal Express Corporation in June of 1991. Rivers was ranked the number one (#1) candidate by CEV points. which is a computer generated ranking determined by the applicants most recent evaluations and years of continuous service with the company. Rivers had worked for the Defendant since November of 1981, and was currently working as the lead control room agent, in a part time capacity at the Defendant's world wide headquarters and primary sort facility in Memphis, Tennessee. Rivers was asked to complete a supplemental application (questionnaire) by hiring manager Marguerite Thompson (black female). Thompson received the supplemental application back and conducted a telephone interview with Rivers in July of 1991. The Plaintiff was offer the full time control room agent's position after the interview and Thompson mailed Rivers an Oakland newspaper to find an apartment. Soon thereafter Rivers was contacted by Micheal Meyer and Kenneth Allison, (white males) and was informed that he was not hired for the position and they would have to start the hiring process all over again. Rivers was asked to complete another supplemental application. After seven months of telephone conversations and e-mail letters between Rivers and Allison, Rivers was interviewed a second time by Meyer and Allison on February 4, 1992. On February 28, 1992 Rivers received a rejection letter that stated that Tim Breen (white male) was selected for the position. On March 31, 1992 Rivers filed a complaint with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission. On September 2, 1993 Rivers picked up from the EEOC a no cause letter of determination. According to an internal memo dated May 5, 1993, in the EEOC file, (obtained through the Freedom of Information Act), Rivers was to receive a no cause letter due to his "failure to accept what the EEOC felt was full relief remedy" at that time. On June 21, 1993 Rivers received a letter which stated that the EEOC was wrong in calculating the amount of back pay due Rivers. On November 24, 1993, Rivers filed suit in the District Court for the Western District of Tennessee, Western Division, for a violation of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C s2000e. On November 4, 1994 the Defendant filed a Second Motion for Summary Judgment on merits and claimed that there were no genuine issues of material fact that exist, and that Rivers failed to offer any evidence whatsoever on the elements of proof that is essential to a prima facie showing. On January 18, 1995 Judge Julia Smith Gibbons granted the Defendant's Second Motion for Summary Judgment. On February 13, 1995 Rivers filed a Notice of Appeal with the United States Court of Appeal for the Sixth Circuit. On March 16, 1995 an Order Taxing Costs against Rivers was signed by Robert R. Di Trolio, Clerk for the District Court.

On April 26, 1995, Rivers filed an Appeal and Brief Opposing the Order Granting The Defendant-Appellee Federal Express Corporation Second Motion for Summary Judgment. On February 2, 1996 the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit signed an order affirming the District Court's previous order Granting Summary Judgment in favor of the defendant, Federal Express.

REASON FOR GRANTING THE WRIT

This case calls for an exercise of the Supreme Court of the United State supervisory power, due to the fact that the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit has sanctioned such a far departure from the previous standards that has been established by the Supreme Court of the United States, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit, and the state court, in cases which have established the current standard to protect the civil rights of the plaintiff in Title VII violations.

The decision rendered in this case contradicts with the Supreme Court's clearly established standard in determining what direct and indirect evidence is necessary to demonstrate that the articulated explanation given by a defendant in a Title VII case is pretextual. citing Graham v. F.B. zLeopold Co. 779 F. 2d 170, 173 (3d Cir. 1995).

The U.S. Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit has set a lesser standard for a plaintiff in a Title VII case to demonstrate dissimilar treatment. citing Brown v. State of Tennessee, 693 F. 2d 60, 603 (6th Cir. 1982).

If the decision by the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit in this case is left to stand, it would clearly erode....the present degree of civil rights protection of a plaintiff in a Title VII case, and creates an environment that allows and promotes a defendant and the courts, in Title VII cases to inappropriately use a motion for summary judgment as a "harsh weapon" in resolving cases where there is direct and indirect evidence of dissimilar treatment, pretex, and unresolved issues or material fact.

Fact Material To Consider

The Order Granting Defendant's Second Motion For Summary Judgment, U.S. District Court, January 18, 1995, states the following;

1.) Plaintiff met or exceeded all requirements for the position and was ranked first out of all applicants in CEV Points.

2.) Summary judgment is appropriate "if the pleading depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law." Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c).

3.) The party moving for summary judgment "bears the burden of clearly and convincingly establishing the nonexistence of any genuine issues of material fact, and the evidence as well as all inferences drawn therefrom must be read in a light most favorable to the party opposing the motion." Knchins v. Linden Alimak, Inc., 799 F.2d 1128, 1133 (6th Cir. 1986).

4.) When confronted with a properly supported motion for summary judgment, the non-moving party must set forth specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial. A genuine issue for trial exists if the evidence is such that a reasonable jury could return a verdict for the non-moving party. Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 248 (1986).

5.) To survive a motion for summary judgment on a Title VII clam, plaintiff must prove a Prima facie case of discrimination by a preponderance of the evidence. Wilson v. Stroh Cos., 952 F. 23d 942, 946 (6th Cir. 1992) citing Texas Dep't of Community Affairs v. Burdine, 450 U.S. 248 (1981). If plaintiff succeeds, the burden of production shifts to defendant to articulate a legitimate, non-discriminatory reason for its, action. Galbraith v. Northern Telecom, Inc., 944 F. 2d 275, 279 (6th Cir. 1991)

6.) If defendant offers such a reason, the burden shifts back to plaintiff, who must show by a preponderance that defendant's proffered reasons are a pretext for discrimination. St. Mary's Honor Ctr. v. Hicks, U.S.,113 S. Ct. 2742, 2752 (1993).

7.) To establish a prima facie case, plaintiff must show that:
(1) he belongs to a protected group;

(2) he applied for and was qualified for the promotion;
(3) he was considered for and denied the promotion; and
(4) a similarly qualified employee who was not a member of a protected group was promoted at time plaintiff's request was denied. Brown v. Tennessee, 693 F. 2d 600, 603 (6th Cir. 1982).

8.) The District Court inappropriately accepted the following articulated reasons for the defendant's actions:

(1) Breen had held this position for one month longer than plaintiff.
(2) Defendant claims that experience acquired in the Oakland hub is more valuable than that gained in Memphis.
(3) He (Breen) had a greater familiarity with its operation.
(4) Finally, Meyer and Allison each contend that Breen displayed greater commitment and enthusiasm in the interview and throughout the selection process.

A plaintiff may show pretext "either directly by persuading the court that a discriminatory reason more likely motivated the employer or indirectly by showing that the employer's proffered explanation is unworthy of credence."

Burdine, 450 U.S. at 256.

The U.S. Court of Appeals Affirmed the District's Court Order based on the following reasons.

"Rivers met or exceeded all requirements for the position and was ranked first over all applicants in CEV points. CEV points are points reflected on a computer-generated list that considered company seniority and individual's most recent evaluation."

"Upon review, we conclude that the district court properly granted summary judgment to the defendant as there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and the defendant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. See Fed. R. Civ. P.56(c);City Mgnt. Corp. v. U.S. Chem. Co., 43 F.3d 244, 250 (6th Cir. 1994).
Rivers is not entitled to relief because he did not meet his burden of proving employment discrimination as set forth in McDonnell Douglas Corp. v. Green, 411 U.S. 802 (1973). Even if it is assumed that Rivers established a prima facie case of discrimination, the defendant met its burden of articulating legitimate, non-discriminatory reasons by stating that it selected Breen over Rivers because Breen was already working at the Oakland hub, had a greater familiarity with its operation, had more favorable evaluation that Rivers, and displayed greater commitment and enthusiasm in the interview and throughout the selection process. See St. Mary's Honor Ctr. v. Hicks, 113 S. Ct. 2742 2747-50 (1993); Texas Dept of Community Affairs v. Burdine, 450 U.S. 248, 255 (1981). Ultimately, however. when it was his burden to do so, Rivers failed to raise a genuine issue of material fact that the defendant's reason for selecting Breen over him were pretextual. See St. Mary's Honor Ctr., 113 S. Ct/ at 2747-50; Burdine, 450 U.S. at 254-56."

"In his brief on appeal, Rivers advances new arguments as grounds for finding a pretext of racial discrimination. Unless exceptional circumstances are present, the court normally will not address an issue not first raised in the district court. See Foster v. Barilow, 6 F. 3d 405, 407 (6th Cir. 1993). No exceptional circumstances warrant addressing these arguments now. The critical question in this case is whether the selection criteria were applied to applicants in a discriminatory manner. There was an utter absence of evidence of a racial animus in this case.

Accordingly, the district court's order is affirmed Rule 9(b)(3), Rules of the Sixth Circuit.

STATEMENT OF THE FACTS MATERIAL TO CONSIDERATION OF THE QUESTIONS PRESENTED FOR REVIEW

The District Court totally disregarded the following direct evidence that was introduced in the Plaintiff's Response to Defendant's Second Motion For Summary Judgment, which clearly demonstrated dissimilar treatment:

"Breen was required to make a 12 month commitment to the position, while Plaintiff was informed that the position required an 18 month commitment." (page 7)

"Plaintiff was told that he would not be paid the maximum starting pay and the he would have to start at something less than the maximum pay. Breen,s offer letter give him the maximum pay, a clear indication of dissimilar treatment." (page 8). Breen was in fac treated better than Plaintiff during the selection process: Breen was required to make a 12 month commitment to the position, while Plaintiff was informed that the position required an 18 month commitment. (see page 7, 8 plaintiff response)

"In his deposition Plaintiff stated that he was subjected to a "hostile" interview (Rivers Dep. 162). This was support by Plaintiff's testimony that he had worked in Personnel and had been taught proper methods of interviewing candidates (Rivers Dep. 166). At one point the Oakland hub Senior Manager looked the Plaintiff in the eye and said that "you don't want this job". (see page 4 plaintiff response). The defendant has never denied making this statement during Rivers interview.

The District Court totally disregarded the following direct evident that was introduced in the Plaintiff's Response To Second Motion For Summary Judgment which clearly shows pretext by the blatant contradictions, and inconsistencies, in the defendant's articulated reason for it's action.

Originally the defendant's primary reason for their selection of Breen over Rivers was due to the fact that Breen had held the job title of control room agent 19 days longer that Rivers had been a control room agent.

"The Defendant has also attempted to rely on the fact that Breen was in the department longer that Plaintiff by 19 day, a factor that should not even be utilized in the selection process, as clearly show by the testimony of Bennie Williams, (Director of Personnel for Federal Express.) Williams Dep. page 29, 30 Ex. U) and Defendant's PEOPLE Manual." (see page 6 plaintiff response) Bennie Williams stated, "In the selection in the CSSD division of the hubs, departmental seniority has no standing, it doesn't mean anything, not for selection". Williams also stated, on page 29, 30 that if a person could do the job in one place [Memphis] although not identical, they could probably do the job in the other location [Oakland]."

Prior to Williams contradicting the defendant's reason for their action, they had relied heavily on these reason. After Williams made this bold contradiction the defendant changed their reason to Breen displayed more enthusiasm in the interview, but the defendant has never produced any interview scores to support their claim.

The fact that Breen was currently working at the Oakland hub was also contradicted by Williams as being a legitimate reason to select Breen over Rivers according to Federal Express policy and procedures for selecting hourly employees.

The District Court acknowledges that Rivers CEV points ranked him the number (#1) applicant for the position, and that CEV points are based on the most recent evaluations and years on continuous service with the company. The defendant attempt to mislead intentionally mislead the District court to believe that Breen evaluation were higher, It was pointed to the District Court that Rivers and Breen both feel into the category or "excellent" employees, based on there evaluations alone, and that Rivers 10 years of company service compared to Breen's 4 years should have been the determining factor, that is why Rivers was ranked #1 in CEV point. (see page 6, plaintiff response

The credibility of the defendant's witnesses, could not be determined within the context of a summary judgment " This is supported by the fact that Marguerite Thompson told the EEOC investigator that she interviewed Plaintiff for the position for which he applied (Investigative notes, Exhibit A) Thompson later stated during sworn deposition that she did not interview plaintiff and did not offer him the position.

All these issues were also pointed out in the Plaintiff-Appellant James N. Rivers Appeal and Brief Opposing the Order Granting The Defendant-Appellee Federal Express Corporation Second Motion for Summary Judgment, in the following order and on the following pages in his brief to the U.S. Court of Appeal for the Six Circuit.

After Thompson received the supplemental application back from Rivers, she conducted a telephone interview with Rivers for the position. River understood that he was offered the position of full time control room agent by Thompson during the interview.

The reason stated that Breen had been in the department one month longer than Rivers, and that he [Breen] knew the players better than Rivers, were strongly and unequivocally rebutted by their own [Federal Express] Managing Director of Personnel, Bennie Williams. Williams stated during his deposition. "in the selection in the CSSD division of the hubs, departmental seniority has no standing, it doesn't mean anything, ont for selection" and listed as)Ex. X, Williams Dep. page 29, 30). Williams also state, "that if a person could do the job in one place although not identical, they could probably do the job in the other location.

The Record will show that there was dissimilar treatment, in that Breen was treated more favorably than Rivers. Breen was quoted the maximum starting salary, which Rivers was told during his interview that he would not earn the maximum salary and that he would not be able to live in Oakland on a full time control room agent's salary. and was listed as (EX. Z, Rivers Dep. page 169, 170, 171) Breen was offered more favorable terms of employment, in that Rivers was told that he would have to stay in the same position for 18 months before he could be promoted or get a pay raise. (Ex. Z, Rivers Dep. page 168) Breen signed an offer letter which stated he would receive the maximum starting salary and he only had to stay in the position 12 months before he would receive a pay raise. This is bold and blatant dissimilar treatment, that was introduced to the District Court and the U.S. Court of Appeals. Such dissimilar treatment smacks of racial bias.

Thompson, Meyer and Allison's motivation, internt, credibility and state of mind could not be resolved in the context of a summary judgment by the District Court.

SUMMARY

The Plaintiff has intorduce sufficient direct and indirect evidence to show pretex, by the pattern of contridictions, and inconsistencies indtoduced in the record between the defendant's hiring managers, Meyer and Allson and the defentant's Director of Personnel, Bennie Williams

The Plaintiff has introduce sufficient evidence to demonstrate the existence of genuine issues of material fact by showing that Allison and Meyer intentionally deviated from the company's printed guidelines for selection, as stated by Bennie Williams, Director of Personnel for Federal Express.

The plaintiff has demonstrated dissimilar treatment by showing in the record that Breen was offered a higher starting pay than Rivers and more favorable terms and condition of employment. The defendant admits that Breen received the maximum starting salary and more favorable terms of employment, and justify their action by stating " that it is a small hook to base a law suit on." The fact of the matter is blatant dissimilar treatment is a is still dissimilar treatment,.. no mater how it is view in the eyes of the defendant.

The District Court did not have a record of complete trial to determine intent, motivation of the defendant.

The district Court improperly granted summary judgment in favor of defendant after plaintiff raised triable issue of fact that the explanation given by defendant was pretextual.

The District Court and the U.S. Court of Appeals fail to acknowledge that the plaintiff meet all four elements for a prima facie showing in Title VII case.

ARGUMENT

According to the law, in a promotion case, the plaintiff must prove similarly situated non protected employee(s) were treated better. Harper v. Frank, 985 F2d. 285, 288 (6th Cir. 1993).

Summary judgment is not appropriate where trail with it's opportunity for cross examination and testing of credibility of witnesses, might disclose picture substantially different from that given by affidavits, United States v. Perry (1970 CA9 Cal) 431 F2d 1020 19 AlK Fed. 537.

Summary judgment will not be granted if affiants and deponents make statements contradicting one another, as this presents factual issue of credibility, Coca-Cola Co. v. Kelly's Taunton Ava., Inc. (1970. DC R1) 308 F. Supp 308.

In general, summary judgment s inappropriate tool for resolving claims of employment discrimination, which involve nebulous questions of motivations and intent. Thornbrough v. Columbus + C. R. Co. (1985, CA5 Mis.) 760 F2d 633 37 BNA FED CAS 1414, 37 CCH EPD 35274.

Where opposing affidavits appeared to conflict on important point in issue, District Court improperly granted defendant's motion for summary judgment since any doubt must be resolved in favor of party against whom motion is made, and while it might turn out that one witness was right and the other wrong, or that affidavits could in some way be reconciled this could not be done in context of summary judgment. Hopwell Township Citizens I-95 Committee v. Volpe (1973, CAS NJ) 482 F2d 376.

The Supreme Court has acknowledge that "there will seldom be eyewitness testimony as to the employer's mental process 460 U.S. at 716, 103 S. Ct. at 1482. Where direct "smoking gun" evidence of discrimination is unavailable, this court has found that the proper inquiry is "whether evidence of inconsistencies and implausibilities in the employer's proffered reasons for discharge reasonable court support an inference that the employer did not act for non-discriminatory reasons, not whether the evidence necessarily leads to the conclusion that the employer did act for discriminatory reason." Chipollini, 814 F. 2d at 900. Graham v. F.B. Leopold Co. 779, F 2d 170, 173 (3d Cir. 1985).

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, the Petiton for a Writ of Certiorari should be granted.

Decided and Filed February 2, 1996

Before: NORRIS and MOORE, Circuti Judges; and MILES, District Judge.

James N. Rivers appeals a district court judgment granting summary judgment in favor of the defendant in this action brought pursuant to 42 U.S.C. §§ 2000e, et seq. This case has been referred to a panel of the court pursuant to Rule 9(a), Rule of the Sixth Circuit. Upon examination, this panel unanumously agrees that oral argument is not needed. Fed. R. App. P. 34(a).

Rivers, a black male, was hired by the defendant, Federal Express Corporation, in November 1981. In May 1990, Rivers was promoted to part-time control room agent at defendant's Memphis, Tennessee hub. Rivers' duties included monitoring inbound and outbound aircraft and truck and acting as liaison for the night sort operation. In June 1991, Rivers applied for a full-time position as a control room agent at the defendant's Oakland, California hub. Rivers met or exceeded all rerequirements for th position and was ranked first out of all applicants in CEV points. CEV points are points reflected on a computer generated list that considered company seniority and and individual's most recent evaluations. Rivers interviewed for the postion on February 4, 1992. The only other candidate interviewed was Tim Breen, a paret-time control agent in Oakland. On February 28, 1992, Rivers was notified that Breen was selected for the job.

Rivers filed a charge of discrimination wth the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) on March 31, 1992, contending that the defendant's failure to select him for the positon was a result of racial discriminaiton. On August 16, 1993, the EEOC issued a "no cause" determination. Rivers filed the prosent action on November 24, 1993, alleging racial discrimination in the denial of a promotion.

The defendant filed a motion for summary judgment solely on the grounds that Rivers's complaint was untimely. The district court denied this motion on October 31, 1994. The defendant filed a socond motionfor summary judgment on the merits of the discrimination clam. The district court granted the motion for summary judgment in an order entered January 20, 1995. This timely appeal followed. Upon review, we conclude that th district court properly granted summary judgment to the defendant as there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and the defendant is entitled to judgmetn as a matter of law. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c); City Mgmt. Corp. v. .S. Chem.

Co. 43 F. 3d 244, 250 (6th Cir. 1994). Rivers is not entitled to relief because he did not meet his burden of proving employment discrimination as set forth in McDonnell Douglas Corp. v.Green, 4111 U.S. 792, 802, (1973). Even if it is assumed that Rivers established a prima facie case of discrimination, the defendant met its burden of articulating legitimate, nondiscriminatory reasons by stting that ti selected Breen over Rivers because Breen was already working at the Oakland hub, had a greater familiarity with ti operation, had more favorable evauations than Rivers, and displayed greater commitment and enthusiasm in the interview and throughout the selection process. See ST. Mary's Honor Ctr. v. Hicks, 113 S Ct. 2742, 2747-50 (1993) Texas Dep't of Community Affairs v. Burdine, 450 U.S. 248, 255 (1981) . Ultimately, however, when it was his burden to do so, Rivers failed to raise a genune issue of material fact that the defendnat's reason for selectng Breen over him were pretextual. SEE ST. Mary's honor Ctr., 113 S. Ct. at 274750; Burdine, 450 U.S. at 254-56.

In brief on appeal, Rivers advances new arguments as grounds for finding a pretext of racial discrimination. Unless exceptiona circumstances are present, the court normmally willnot addtess an issue not first raised in the district court. See Foster v. Barilow, 6 F. 3d 405, 407 (6th Cir. 1993). No exceptional circumstance warrant addrissing these arguments now. The critical questionin this case is whether the selection criteria were applied to applicants in a discriminatory manner. There was an utter absence of evidence of a racial animus in this case.

Accordingly, the district cort's order is affirmed. Rule 9(b)(3), Rules of the Sixth Circuit.

ORDER GRANTING DEFENDANT'S SECOND MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

Before the court is the motion to defendant, Federal Express Corp., for summary judgment. Plaintiff brought this action pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 2000e et seq. for alleged racial discrimination in the denial of a promotion. For the following reasons, defendant's motion is granted.

Plaintiff, a black male, was hired by defendant, Federal Express, in November 1981. In May, 1990, plaintiff was promoted to part-time control room agent at defendant's Memphis hub. Plaintiff's duties included monitoring inbound and outbound aircraft and trucks and acting as liaison for the night sort operation In June, 1991, plaintiff applied for a full-time position as a control room agent at defendant's Oakland, California hub. Plaintiff met or exceeded all requirements for the position and was ranked first out of all applicants in CEV points. CEV points are points reflected on a computer-generated list that considered company seniority and an individual's most resent evaluations. After receiving plaintiff's application, Marguerite Thompson, an operations manager in Oakland, conducted a telephone interview with plaintiff. Thompson is a black female. When Thompson was transferred, Kenneth Allison, Thompson's replacement, and Michael Meyer, a senior manager, both white males, assumed responsibility for filling the position. Plaintiff interviewed with Meyer and Allison in Oakland on February 4, 1992. The only other candidate interviewed was Tim Breen, a part-time control room agent in Oakland. On February 28, 1992, plaintiff was notified that Breen was selected for the job.

Plaintiff filed a charge of discrimination with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission on March 31, 1992, contending that defendant's failure to select him for the position was a result of race discrimination. On August 16, 1993, the EEOC issued a "no cause" determinaiton. Plaintiff filed the present suit on November 24, 1993.

Summary judgment is appropriate "if the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions of file, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact ant that the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law" Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c). The party moving for summary judgment "bears the burden of clearly and convincingly establishing the nonexistence of any genuine issue of material fact, and the evidence as well favorable to the party opposing the motion." Kochins v. Linden-Alimak, Inc. 799 F. 2d 1128, 1133 (6th Cir 1986).

Wghen confornted with a properly supported motion for summary judgment, the non moving party must set forth specific facts showing the there is a genuine issue for trial. Agenuine issuefor trial exists if the evidence is such that a reasonable jury could return a verdict for the non-moving party, Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc. 477 U.S. 242 (1986). The party opposing the motion must "do more that simply show that thereeis some mete-physical doubt as to the material facts." matsushita Elec. Indus. Co v. Zenith Radio Corp., 475 U.S. 574, 587 (1986). In short, the non-moving party may not oppose a prpperly supported summary judgment motion by mere reliance on pledings. Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 324 (1986).

To survive a motion for summary judgment on a Title VII clain, plainfitt msut prove a prima facie case of discrimination by a preponderance of the evidence. Wilson v. Stroh Cos., 952 F. 2d 942, 945 (6th Cir. 1992) citing Texas Dep't of Community Affairs v. Burdine, 450 U.S, 248 (1981). If plaintiff succeeds, the burden of productionshifts to defendant to articulate a legitimate, non-discriminatory reason for its action. Galbraith v. Northern Tlelcom, Inc., 944 F.2d 275 (6th Cir. 1991) citing Burdine, 450 U.S. at 253, cert, 112 S. Ct. 1497 (1992). If defendant offer such a reason, the burden shifts back to plaintiff, who must show by a preponderance that defendant's proffered reasons are a pretext for for disctimination. St. mary's Honor Ctr. v. Hicks, U.S. 113, S. Ct 2742, 2752 (1993).

To establisha prima facie cse, plaintiff umst sho that (1) he belongs to a protected group; (2) he applied for and was qualified for the pormotion; (3) he was considered for and denied the promotion; and (4) a similarly qualified employee who was not a member of a protected group was promoted at time plaintiff's request was dinied, Brown v. Tennesse, 693 F. 2d 600, 603 (6th Cir. 1982).

It is undisputed that plaintiff satisfies the first three elements of the prima facie case. Defendant argues that the fourth element is not satisfied because Breen's qualifications are not similar to plaintiff's The court need not resolve this issue, however, becoause even assuming tht plaintiff state a prima facie case of discirimination, defendant has articulaed ligitimate, non-discriminatory rasosn fo selecign Breen over plaintif.

Although Breen was a part-time control room agent, like plaintiff, Breen had held this position for one month longer that plaintiff. In addition, defendant clamims that expreience acquied in the Oakland hub ins more valuable that that gained in Memphis because, due to a size difference between the hubs, control room agents in Oakland are given broader responsibilities. (Meyer Aff. 7). Moreover, because Breen wasalready working at the Oakland location, he had a greater lamiliarity wiht its operations, particularly certain computer systems fundtion. (Allison Aff. 6) Also it is undisputed that Breen's periodic evaluation were more favorale that plaintiff's (Rivers Dep at 190). Finally, Meyer and Allison each cntend that Breen displayed greater commitment and enthusiansm in the interview and throughout the selection process. Their impressionwas that plaintiff sought the positon not for the job itself, but because he waned to attend a flight dispatch school in Oakland. (Meyer Aff. 10; Allison Aff. 6).

Court have consistently held that "so long as its reason are not discriminatory, an employer is free to choose among qualified candidtes" for a position. Wrenn v. Gould, 808 F. 2d 493, 502 (6th Cir. 1987). See also Mesnick v. General Elec,.Co., 950 F. 2d 816, 825 (1st Cir. 1991) ("Courts may not sit as suyper personnel department, assessing the merit-or even the rationality of employers' nondiscriminatory business dicision."_ cert. denied, 112 S. Ct 2965 (1992). The easons offered by defendnat for not selecting plaintiff are legitimate and non-discrminatiory. The burden thus shifts to plaintiff to establish that defendant's reason for selectiong Breen are pretextual.

Aplaintiff may show pretext "either dircetly by persuading teh court tha discriminatory reaosn more likely motiviated the employer of indirectly by showing that the employer's proffered explanationis unworth of credence." Burdine, 450 U.S. at 256. Plaintiff offers two bases for his coontentionthat defendant's failure to select himwas sidciminatiory. first, plaintiff note sthat his CEV points were the highest of all the applicants for the position, and the therefore should have received the promotion.

It is undisputed, however, that for technical and leadership positons, such as the control room agent positoin sought by plaintfiff, coompany policy dictates tha tCEV point ranking by sued only to determin which candidates are interviewed. (Thompson Aff. 10; Meyer Aff 4; Allison Aff5) In fact compy policy expressly prohibits managment from such a positon. Def. Ex B Rivers Dep. at 198).

Second, plaintiff contend sthat Meyer and Allison conducted his interview in a hostile manner. Specifically, plaintiff claims they asked him" negative questions" and did not employ proper interview techniques. (Rivers Dep. at 162-67). Meyer and Allison claim they were attempting to ascertain plaintiff's commitment ot the job and to the Oakland area. Specifically, they mention their concern that plaintiff appreciate th economic impact of moving to Oakland form Memphis.

Even if the court accepted plaintiff' contention that Meyer and Allison were "hostile" in the interview, plaintiff does not offer any evience indicatin that they were hostile to plaintiff aon acount of his race. Therefore, even if plaintiff coul show that the reasons offered by defendant are not legitimat, plaintiff fails to extablish the necessary causal connection between discrimination and defendant's failure to promote. See St. Mary's, 113 S. Ct. at 2749. Plaintiff offers no evidence that Meyer and Allison considered plaintiff's race a factor in selection a candidate for the promotion. Mere conclusory assertions of discrimination are not sufficient to withstand a motion for summary judgment. Patterson v. General Motors Corp., 631 F. 2d 476, 482 (7th Cir. 1980), cert. dinied, 451 U.S. 914 (1981).

The undisputed evidence cannot support a conclusion that defendant refused to promote plaintiff on account of his race. Accordingly, defendant's motion for summary judgment is granted.

IT IS SO ORDERED.
